- The throw-out is performed exclusively with the hand and it is not possible to directly score a goal either in one's own goal or in the opponent's goal.
- Goal out, the goalkeeper can score with both his hand and his foot, but he cannot cross half of the pitch because it will be awarded indirectly for the opponent from the center line
- If the goalkeeper caught the ball with his hand during the game, he can throw it with his hand across the half, but he cannot score a goal with his hand. If that happens, it will be a goal out. If he throws it on the ground, or on his leg, and then kicks it with his foot, he can score a direct hit.
- Substitutions are on the fly, but the player entering the field cannot enter before the player leaving the game has left. If that happens, an indirect free kick is awarded for the opponent from the center line.
